

INQUIRE INTO CAUSE OF CALUMET TRAGEDY

INVESTIGATION OF ITALIAN HALL PANIC OCCUPIES CENTER OF INTEREST TODAY.

DECLARE RUMOR FALSE

Witnesses Vigorously Deny That Man Who Gave Alarm of "Fire" Was a Citizens' Alliance Button.

Calumet, Mich., Dec. 29.—The inquiry into the cause of the Italian hall panic in Calumet, Christmas eve, which cost the lives of seventy-two men, women and children, held the center of interest in the copper country strike district today.

When Coroner William Fisher called the inquest in the town hall the room was crowded to capacity. A half dozen witnesses testified, including Annie Clemens, leader of the Women's Auxiliary of the Western Federation of Miners, the organization which was distributing Christmas gifts to the children when the panic in Italian hall broke out.

The testimony of the witnesses contradicted the generally circulated rumor that a man wearing a Citizens' Alliance button had rushed up the stairs and shouted "fire" and that deputies stood at the foot of the stairs and beat back those coming out of the hall. All testified to the effect that they had not seen any man wearing a Citizens' Alliance button come into the hall wearing such a button.

Mrs. Clemens has been generally said to have been one of those who persistently circulated the report that the man who gave the false alarm of fire was a Citizens' Alliance button. She has since then disclaimed any knowledge of that kind and asserted she had seen no one affiliated with the Citizens' Alliance, an organization opposed to the strike, come into the hall.

Describes Experience. Mrs. Teresa Sizer, the only witness who saw the man who yelled "fire," described her experience graphically. She was sitting at a table near the stage trying to restrain a rush of children toward the Christmas tree. When she heard the alarm she jumped from the table, ran to the door and grasped him by the shoulders. "Man, man, what are you doing?"

"There is a fire," he replied. "No, no, keep still," said Mrs. Sizer and tried vainly to force him into a chair. All in the hall, however, were rushing towards the exit and the panic was beginning to spread to those about the stage. Mrs. Sizer quit arguing with the man, ran upon the platform and began to play loudly upon the piano. Then the piano began to die down.

Wore No Button. Mrs. Sizer described the man as of medium height, and dressed in dark clothing. He had a dark mustache. She said he wore no button or insignia and was not near the entrance of the hall when she first heard his voice.

The coroner's inquest began here today and the grand jury investigation is expected to begin tomorrow at Hancock, where Meyer was assaulted and put aboard a Chicago bound train. The coroner is expected here today to make an investigation for the government of the strike of the copper miners. Before reaching here he will consult with Gov. Ferris at Big Rapids, Michigan, and will then return to the department of labor. It is expected that the government will make an investigation for the government of the strike of the copper miners. Before reaching here he will consult with Gov. Ferris at Big Rapids, Michigan, and will then return to the department of labor. It is expected that the government will make an investigation for the government of the strike of the copper miners.

Hold Conference. Big Rapids, Mich., Dec. 29.—John B. Denmore, a solicitor of the government's department of labor, and George A. McDonald, mine and mill lawyer in the copper mine strike district, conferred with Gov. Ferris at his home here this morning concerning the strike situation. Mr. Denmore made arrangements to leave for Calumet at 9:45 this forenoon.

"I'm still of the opinion that there is no necessity for the federal authorities to take action in this affair," said the governor this morning. There is a grand jury in session at Washington. Meyer or anybody else can go before that body and get justice. It is strictly a strike matter and Michigan can handle it.

Better. Chicago, Dec. 29.—Reports from the hospital where Charles H. Meyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners was taken, indicated today a speedy recovery from injuries inflicted when he was forced to leave the copper country.

Fully Discussed. Washington, Dec. 29.—Congressional investigation of the Calumet copper mine strike was discussed at informal conferences between members of the house rules committee today and individual expressions indicated that the present agreed that no federal question was involved in the case. The Western Federation of Miners and Representative McDonald of Michigan are pressing for a federal inquiry. John B. Denmore, solicitor of the department of labor, is in Michigan acting for Secretary Wilson.

UNABLE TO CONTROL SAN SEBASTIAN FIRE

Flames Rage Through Spanish City Razing Tenement House District and Threaten Business Sections.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] San Sebastian, Spain, Dec. 29.—A fire which threatened to wipe out most of this city started at midnight in the tenement house district and was still raging unchecked at noon.

The flames were fanned by a high wind. An immense block of buildings, mostly tenement dwellings, was destroyed before daylight. Thousands of the inhabitants of the surrounding district spent the morning in the streets guarding such of their household goods as they had been able to remove hastily.

Shortly after daylight the fire reached a big theatre and a variety ball in the center of the city. Both buildings were destroyed in spite of the best efforts of firemen and soldiers. From this spot the flames advanced toward the military barracks which were vacated immediately by order of the commanding officer.

Practically all the available soldiers were assigned to duty as firemen although their efforts had little apparent effect in checking the conflagration.

WHOLESALE TRADERS PLAN TO USE RIVER FOR BYRON'S MURDER

Twin City Men Looking to Mississippi Boat Line for Transporting Merchandise.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] St. Paul, Dec. 29.—Wholesalers in nearly every line of trade in the Twin cities today set on foot plans looking toward the handling of a great amount of freight by a line of boats operating between the cities and the Gulf of Mexico. A river terminal costing half a million dollars is already under construction under the Washington Avenue bridge in Minneapolis and it has been predicted that the big business interests of the two cities will be operating boats to New Orleans by the middle of next summer.

The primary object of the enterprise is to force down the railroad freight rates against which the local wholesalers have lodged countless complaints. The new rate between Duluth and the Twin Cities make speedy action of jobbers a necessity and it is believed that river transportation is the solution of the problem.

Another incentive behind the proposed river freight line is the opening of the Panama canal. New Orleans is destined to become the receiving point for an enormous mass of merchandise and a river line here and between that city would be of enormous value.

BILLY SUNDAY OPENS PITTSBURGH CRUSADE

Ball Player Evangelist Starts Converting Work in Structure Built in Four Weeks.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Pittsburgh, Dec. 29.—In the largest "tabernacle" ever created in the city for any evangelist, "Billy" Sunday will open an eight-week revival here tomorrow. The huge structure was reared on the Bellefield tract, near the city limits, and will accommodate thousands of people.

The building will seat about 10,000 people, besides the chorus of from 1,500 to 2,000 that has been rehearsing for weeks. Inside the dimensions, only four weeks were consumed in the building. A large force of Pittsburgh workmen under "Master" Joseph Speice—Sunday's contractor—did the work.

Sunday admits that Pittsburgh has proven the hardest place he has ever tackled. But he predicts that he will convert thousands while here. Stern opposition marked his coming. Lutherans, Methodists and Presbyterians, thousands of citizens and what the "Billy" called the "Devil's gang" working separately and from different angles against his coming.

Sunday insisted that the congregation lead a revival, and he made his coming conditional on the closing of most of all the local churches. He won his point.

The charge arose out of a bill for $40 presented by a London hotel. Mrs. Pitt Rivers was remanded for a week and admitted to bail.

PRESIDENT SWAMPED BY CORRESPONDENCE AT PASS CHRISTIAN

No Staff of Secretaries Causes the President to Keep Busy Answering Letters.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Pass Christian, Miss., Dec. 29.—Although President Wilson is courteously left unmolested by residents of this vicinity, hundreds of people in all parts of the country daily are pursuing him through the mails.

The president is devoting much more time than he had expected to correspondence. Dr. Cary Grayson, his physician today said the president was slowly improving in health, but needed more rest. Accordingly, it was stated that hereafter Mr. Wilson will refrain from attempting to answer communications except those of unusual importance. Of these there have been very few.

Many people desirous of reaching the president through the mails have directed their letters here. There is no large staff of secretaries here such as is maintained at the White House. However, the process here is much the same as at Washington. Only letters of an urgent character have been referred to the president by those who are handling his mail.

The bulk of the correspondence is not to be directed to the president's attention, but he returns to Washington. The mail will be systematically condensed for him in the customary way.

Among the letters which have been pouring in at Pass Christian are many from bankers and others for membership in the new federal reserve bank.

Students of the Mississippi Agricultural college at Stockville, have planned to elect President Wilson and his family as honorary members of the college. Three dozen fresh eggs today were sent to President Wilson through the parcel post. The college students who will continue to study at the college.

The president today went golfing although heavy rains had transformed some of the putting greens into mud puddles. The president said he was feeling unusually well today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, Dec. 29.—A half educated, half ignorant, near German philosopher, tainted with hereditary insanity, who nearly became over-reliant.

Thus Schmidt, the German priest, was thus described today by his counsel in summing up the Schmidt trial for the murder of Anna Ammiller. The defense offered a verdict of insanity on the ground of insanity. William M. K. O'Leary for the defense said his client's greatest virtue was a desire to help others, although it was not always directed toward the right channels. He insisted that Schmidt really loved the Ammiller girl and wanted to marry her. The prosecution contends that this was not the case, but that Schmidt was a man of great intelligence and that he did not make her his wife.

STATE BANKS SHOW GREATER STABILITY

Nothing Can Stop State Controversies and Value of Property to Make Rates Opinion of B. H. Meyer.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 29.—The axiom that it was "more important that justice be achieved in a large way than that some specific standard should be promulgated, and adhered to under all conditions," was laid down by Interstate Commerce Commissioner B. H. Meyer today in discussing railway rate making before the American Economic Association.

As long as great individuals engage in trade offering to rival consumers the same or competing commodities the railway rate problem will continue to exist," he said. "The present system of ownership and system of regulations may give way to different system of regulations and these in turn may be superseded by a system of public ownership, but none of these will terminate rate controversies."

Value of property. Commissioner Meyer said, was perhaps the most important single factor, now unknown, which in the future will enter into the consideration of railway rates. In the past, the value of property has been a standing security against the value of property should receive no consideration whatever in the establishment of rates to be collected for the public use of that property.

The speaker declared that cost of service, at present neglected, will be employed much more in the future. He said that cost systems had been applied to every important branch of industry except steam engineering. Discussing public policy and its effect in shaping railway rates, the commissioner repeated the fixing of rates solely with a view to meeting the real or supposed need of different patrons of the service, irrespective of the cost of service, as a policy of such a policy, he said, "under democratic organization of society like ours, would be to throw the question of rates into politics, to favor one branch of service over another at the expense of others and to the financial detriment of the roads."

"The distance principle has been actively applied in attempts to break up some of the so-called blanket rates, and in dealing with the rates for local industries, and its use is likely to be even greater in the future," he said. "This is another reason for the investigation into the cost of the service, a sound public policy and other considerations may, and should, enter into the fixing of rates. No one can satisfy the specific facts in a rate problem nor the standard or combination of standards best fitted to the particular case and most likely to promote justice to the parties in interest."

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Appleton, Wis., Dec. 29.—Into the public life of the town watch: through the little door with mesh bag, long live the "masher" who has established a new fashion that may spread throughout the country wherever commuters are infected with Jack-be-hugger and chop chop men. During a recent epidemic of hold-ups, a coed found herself at the home of a friend after dark, and far from her dormitory. An escort was not available. So she borrowed the "masher" from a friend and sallied forth. No highwayman appeared but had one put in an appearance she would have prepared for him. Local notions suggest advertising "mashers for misses" to the demand for them threatens to exhaust the available supply.

ACTOR KILLS WOMAN AND YEAR OLD BABY

Prominent Cincinnati Hotel Is Scene of Tragedy Enacted Early Today—Murderer Is Taken.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Cincinnati, Dec. 29.—Robert M. Willard, who says he is a magician, shot and killed a woman registered as his wife, and a little year old baby girl in a prominent hotel here, early today. The tragedy was enacted in the street driving all pedestrians to cover while flourishing a revolver. He was later captured on the suspension bridge trying to make his way to the river.

Willard, the woman and baby were registered at the hotel at 12:30 o'clock this morning.

At the police station Willard said that he was a magician and a son of James Willard, who was killed in Goldsboro, N. C., and was married to the woman and later denied that he had ever been married.

It is supposed that Willard was a member of a theatrical company which played here last week and that he was left behind when the company departed. When locked in a cell Willard screamed, shouted and talked in an incoherent manner.

FEDERALS PREPARE A STRONG DEFENSE FOR REBEL ADVANCE

Two Armies Near Deciding Struggle for Supremacy at Ojinaga—Rebels Resting for Advance.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Presidio, Tex., Dec. 29.—The Mexican federal army at Ojinaga, opposite here, after being free of attack for three weeks, today made ready to fire on the first rebel that came within sight with 4,000 soldiers. Commanded by nine generals, supplied with stores of provisions taken over from the American side, the federals had provided every precaution to resist the forty-two hundred rebels advancing from Chihuahua under Gen. Ortega.

The rebels, after long and short of rations after their long seven day overland journey of more than 150 miles, were resting at a ranch at the south end of the canon known as La Bula Pass. The advance guard of the rebels was still more than eighteen miles from Ojinaga. The prospects were not good for the federals, who would not get through the pass and within firing distance of the rebels within several days. So far no firing between the opposing forces has occurred.

British Marines. Washington, Dec. 29.—The governor of British Honduras has not yet advised the government that the British marines have been actually stationed on the Mexican frontier. Such action, however, has been anticipated with the view of stopping the supply of arms and ammunition to the rebels and guarding the British frontier against violation by either the federals or the rebels.

UNIFORM RATE SCALE FOR RAILROADS NOT AT ALL DESIRABLE

Meyer of Interstate Commerce Commission Makes This Statement at Minneapolis Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Minneapolis, Dec. 29.—A uniform rate scale for all railroads in this country is not a practical possibility nor necessarily a desirable thing, it was held by Balazsar H. Meyer of the interstate commerce commission in an address today to the 25th annual meeting of the American Economic Association.

Government ownership was referred to by Mr. Meyer as the possible final outcome of the present movement for regulation. Even that, he said, would not put an end to rate problems.

Mr. Meyer said he wished it understood that he was speaking as a rate expert and not as a government official.

"The kaleidoscopic nature of the facts which enter into a particular rate problem will always, probably, defeat every attempt to frame a uniform rule upon traffic throughout the United States," said Mr. Meyer. "It is, however, more important that justice should be maintained than that some specific standard should be promulgated."

"The most important single factor is the fair or final value which we hope will be known in the not distant future. Outstanding securities against the property should not receive any consideration in the establishment of rates to be collected for the public use of the property."

"Cost of the service is an important factor, but it is a fact of common knowledge that the science of cost accounting has been applied to every important branch of industry except steam railroad transportation. One might suppose," Mr. Meyer continued, "that the railroads would be the last to lag in producing scientific cost data, but the exact contrary is the fact."

In considering possibilities of increased public regulation, Mr. Meyer said that while in this country railway rates and customs are distinct, in others the administration of the railways is made an instrument in shaping commercial policy.

The meeting of the association will conclude tomorrow with a discussion of economic effects of the supreme court dissolution. The American Sociological Society is meeting with the Economic Association.

The making of railroad rates was considered in a lengthy address by Dr. Balazsar H. Meyer at the morning session here. Dr. Meyer declared that the rate problem is a perpetual proposition. No matter whether the railways remain in private hands or pass into public ownership there will always be questions of rates to be settled, he said.

"The present system of private ownership and systems of regulation may give way to different systems of regulation," he said, "and these in turn may be superseded by a system of public ownership, but none of these will terminate rate controversies."

"As long as rival individuals engage in trade, offering the same or competing commodities," he continued, "placed upon the market by rival producers, and sought by rival consumers with any or all of these believing transportation charge to be excessive or discriminatory, the railway rate problem will continue to exist."

Dr. Meyer said that in dealing with railway rates one comes in contact with nation wide interests and forces and indirectly, perhaps involuntarily, also with international forces.

Valuation of railway property is naturally and properly brought into the question of rate making, according to Dr. Meyer as well as are the operating expenses of the lines. The public eye, however, is apt to be directed toward the value of railway property as determined under the valuation statute rather than to the market value.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, Dec. 29.—A young woman and man were shot to death early today in a double murder in an apartment house on the lower east side. There were two bullet holes in his head and one in his chest. A bullet through the brain had killed the woman.

The police were at first inclined to put the murder down to a murder and suicide, but subsequently began work on the theory that double murder had been committed. Two men were locked up as suspects.

MESSAGES ARE STRONG

The second characteristic of our day is the deep longing for human betterment. The attitude of the church and the message of the pulpit must be up-to-date and in accordance with human betterment. Along with this comes criticism. Why does everybody criticize? Because they have a right to. Everybody judges in proportion to their intelligence. Why is the church the center of criticism?

Dec. 29, 1913.—The barometer is still high throughout the interior of the United States, and especially in the Plateau region. This distribution of atmospheric pressure is favorable to continued fair weather in the Central states, since the course of the areas of low barometer is turned northward, northeastward along the Atlantic coast as a storm of more or less intensity. A barometric depression moving eastward through Canada is now north of the Great Lakes and is attended by cloudiness, and scattered snow flurries in the Lake Region.

Old Clark Griffith doesn't fret a lot over the manner in which he spends the Washington club's money. The Old Fox scatters it around recklessly. For instance, he sent for Ed Ainsmith, the San Antonio catcher, to come to Washington and talk over a few little things. Transportation to and from being in the club. It may be that Ainsmith will sign a contract before returning, but that was not the object of the visit. May be Griffith was lonesome and just wanted someone to chat with.

Sam Langford's victory over Joe Jeannette prompts a little speculation. It begins to look as though all the colored heavyweights are sliding back quite a bit. Gunboat Smith, the champion, has been in a fight with a man named John Smith, who is a long ago and from a glance at the dope it would seem that Gunboat has it all over the smokes. Langford couldn't have been in much better shape when he fought Jeannette than when he fought Smith. Gunboat from this would have little trouble in disposing of Jeannette. Moran is still abroad and perhaps Dan McKeltrick will come up to go between Moran and Jeannette. Although after Johnson's affair with Battling Jim Johnson not many of us need to be convinced that Lil Artha is out of it.

WILL BOWL BELOIT NEW YEAR'S WEEK

Many Ten Pin Contests Scheduled at Miller's Alleys During Week. —Neighbors Wining Notable Game.

Janesville men will try to even past defeats with Beloit at the Line City alleys, the second Friday after New Year's, and they promise to repeat their victory gained in the last clash between the rival fives. Tonight Leary's Colts will roll the Maroons. On Tuesday night the fast amateurs will make the Shirts and Overall fives, led by Captain Motz, to a high score to win the honors. Friday night a classy contest is expected between the Parker Pen five against the First National Bank employees. The Bankers have been up to the high mark in victory over the Milk company and the penmakers are anxious to take them down a notch.

While in Paducah, Kentucky, James Neighbors surprised the village folks by trimming the city's best bowler on a strange alley, in five games by five pins. His opponent, B. M. Philley, averaged 171, while the Janesville man totaled an average of 236. Neighbors' highest game was 199, while his opponent had 236, but consistent rolling put Neighbors to the front.

GOVERNMENT REPORT SHOWS INTERESTING STATISTICS ON EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, Dec. 29.—King Alcohol does not cause such a heavy percentage of deaths in this country as might be gathered from the talk of temperance workers, according to government statistics. Out of 523,398 deaths during 1910 causes of which were ascertained by the Department of Commerce, less than three eighths of one per cent of them were caused by alcoholism. One-ninth of these who succumbed to the demon rum were women.

Natives of the United States are not so nearly addicted to excessive conviviality as those born in other countries. Only three-tenths of one per cent—one-eighth of those were women—died from excessive drinking during 1910.

Scandinavians in the United States suffered more of their numbers to drink than any other nationality. Four fifths of the usual one per cent of deaths being due to hard and sincere application to it. It appears to be confined almost entirely to the men of that nation. Only one twenty-second of the deaths in their ranks were of the gentler sex.

Germans, supposed to be of a heavy drinking nation, were below the general average in deaths from drinking. Two sevenths of one per cent of the deaths of Germans in America being due to this cause. One twentieth of them were women. The Irish paid heavy toll, five eighths of one per cent dying from the cause. One fifth of them were women.

Italian women may well be proud of the record set by the women of their country in the United States. Not a single death among those recorded among Italian women was due to the assimilation of rum in great quantities, although Italian men died from this cause to the extent of one-third of one per cent of the total number of Italian deaths.

SHIP BUFFALO HERD TO NATIONAL PARK

Agricultural Department Increased National Bison Herd Sending Animals to Dakota Park.

Washington, Dec. 27.—A new herd of bison has just been established by the Agricultural Department. There are now five herds under government supervision, totaling a number of 230 animals. The new herd was procured by the Society for the Preservation of the American Bison, from the Bronx Park herd in New York City, and was shipped to Wind Cave National Park in South Dakota.

This latest acquisition includes 15 animals, the youngest being two years old. Forty acres of the park have been fenced for a pasture. The size will be greatly increased next spring. Hay will be provided for the herd during the winter, as the grass on the forty acre space will very soon be eaten off. Contracts will soon be let for fencing four thousand acres of the ten thousand comprising this national reservation and the herd turned loose in it next spring, after which they will forage for their own food.

Latest figures furnished, place the number of bison in the United States and Canada at more than 2,000. A few years ago less than a hundred were known to exist in the world. One government herd, started in 1903 with 37 animals, has increased to 96.

The bison herd owned by the government are now distributed in Wind Cave National Park, Nebraska National Park, Nebraska, Montana National Park, and Wichita Forest Reserve, in Kansas and Oklahoma.

The largest herd owned by the government is the Yellowstone Park herd. The last reports of the warden showed 142 fenced animals, and forty-nine wild ones. Dr. Henry W. Henshaw, chief of the Biological Survey, believes the abnormal increase of the fenced animals is because the tamer animals steal the calves of the wild animals.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Paris, Dec. 29.—The Argentine Minister to Paris, Señor Enrique Larrea, has barred the dance of his country which is now creating a furor all over the world. "There is one place in France," he declared, "where the Argentine 'tango' will not be danced. And that is my house. To Argentine ears the very music is unpleasant. An orchestra which I had recently at my house struck up a tango tune and I immediately ordered the players from the house." Señor Larrea declares that he can see no difference between the tango as it is danced in the elegant ballrooms of Paris than that danced in the disreputable night resorts in Buenos Aires.—the same gestures and the same contortions. It is not true that Argentine cowboys dance it, he said, the gauchos dancing a very different and dignified dance.

Killed by Flying Splinter.

A curious death befell a child at St. Die, France, the other day. A man was cutting up tree trunks for firing. He was splitting some of the large ones by boring a hole, putting in a little gunpowder, and exploding it. A girl of eight watched him from behind a first-floor window which closed. Suddenly a trunk exploded, and a splinter flew up, smashed through the window, and pierced the child's heart. She died immediately.

Champagne is by no means unknown, and whisky and soda is a commonplace of domestic consumption with well-to-do residents.—Singapore Free Press.

FOOLISH PREJUDICE.
The Calumet tragedy of Christmas eve was a repetition of the Calumet fire, and while the loss of life was not as large, the experience was repeated in all its frightful details. The little audience in the Calumet theatre was composed of foreigners' families, representing half a dozen different races. They were poor people, many of them poverty-stricken because of idleness on account of the long continued strike.

These sorrow-stricken homes, however, were American homes, and the great heart of a common brotherhood responded to the touch of sympathy, which sought expression in all available channels. A fund of twenty-five thousand dollars for aid and relief, was speedily raised, and the amount would have been doubled but for the fact that the sufferers were instructed to accept no aid except from labor organizations.

These deplorable conditions reveal the bitterness of feeling which has developed in the strike which has curled the copper country for many months. The responsibility for a class hatred so intense, is a grave responsibility, and the poor victims who suffer are not accountable.

The cause of the strike was a foolish grievance created by agitators.
Wage scales were satisfactory, but the men were induced to believe that recognition of the union was more important than all else, and when this was refused they walked out.

The labor agitator always finds a fertile field where ignorance and prejudice prevail, and the copper miners were easily influenced, but this last move is a dastardly proposition, which should be freely denounced.

The Lake Superior copper mines have been in successful operation for many years, and they will continue to be operated for years to come.
They have furnished steady employment, at good wages, to a contented little army of workmen.

The men who own the mines, and the men who operate them, are neither knaves nor fools. When suffering and sorrow comes to their employees, they are ready to help them, and their quick response to the tragedy which cost so many lives was natural and spontaneous. To thwart its purpose is a crime.

The men in voluntary idleness will doubtless remain in the copper country where mining is the only industry.
If they do, they will be employed by the same companies that they have deserted.

They will discover in time that while the labor agitator may pose as a friend, that he can do nothing for them by way of furnishing the means for an honest living. They should have been permitted to clasp hands across the open grave with the only men who are in position to give permanent relief.

THE SUPREME DICTATOR.
The people of Wisconsin ought to be the most care-free people in the universe. The commonwealth is in the hands of the senior senator, and he is so completely in control that the rank and file is relieved of all responsibility.

He has already outlined the next state campaign, and is now hurrying from Washington to select the next candidate for governor. Every thing goes at his beck and call, and patriots either get in line or get out at the wave of the hand.

The state is no longer cursed with a political machine, polluting everything in sight with its corrupting influence. The supreme dictator is on the throne, with a free hand, and whether the taxes are four million dollars or four times that amount is of little moment, because we have all the time there is to hustle for the money, and there is no complaint.

The scheme works so well in Wisconsin, that other states should try it.
The preliminary work is very simple.
A primary law sets the wheels in motion, and the indifference of an intelligent populace does the rest.

If there is anything more demor-alizing than a political convention, it is yet to be discovered. The moral uplift in the Badger state has been so pronounced, since it was abolished that delegations from the far east have been attracted to study conditions.

This is an age of concentration and we are learning how to conserve everything in sight. Where one man can run a state it saves the wear and tear on a lot of near-statesmen, and why isn't it better?

The people have finally come into the own, and Wisconsin has already arrived. The first fruits of independence are a little rich for our blood, because they are luxuries, and we have been feeding on the larks so long that a ready served banquet, free from care and worry, is a little difficult to digest. Let us stand up to the trough like men, and show our appreciation.

Has anybody noticed the painfully unconcerned look on the faces of Senators Cummins and La Follette since Senator Root declined to be a presidential candidate?

Talks
By CHARLES N. LURIE

GROWTH FROM WITHOUT.

Physically we grow from within outward. Our bodies develop and expand with the coming of maturity and the assimilation of food.

Mentally and morally we grow just as much from without as from within.
We add our accretions as the trees do their wood, each new layer thicker and heavier than its predecessor.

The wise person continues growing in this way throughout life. He gains in stature and growth of wisdom and moral grandeur until the time comes for the forsaking of the body by the spirit.

Perhaps the process is continued on another plane of existence, on a different sphere.

Man grows in correspondence with
and in proportion to the development of his aspirations and ideals. As he strives, consciously or unconsciously, toward higher and better things, so he expands.

President Wilson expressed the idea
well when he said:
"Every man is as big as the thing that he takes possession of."

You reach out and onward to the thing you want, of which you desire to take possession. In the effort to do so you exercise your muscles, your physical, mental and moral powers.

You may fall short at first.
In fact, if your aspiration is a worthy one you will not attain it at one effort. You must learn to wait and work.

But in the end you will reach it if you strive long enough and hard enough.

You will take possession of it, as President Wilson says.

And it will take possession of you,
for a worthy end and aim in life becomes an obsession and its attainment not only an object of desire, but a pleasure.

"All men have what they live for,"
says Arnold Bennett in "The Old Wives' Tale."

Have you decided what you are living for? If you are living for money you may have it, but you will have to pay a high price for it.

If you are living for affection or for fame or for public esteem you may have that—

If you want it hard enough.
"What do you want in life? Pay the price and take it," says Emerson.

That important duty, bathing baby, is no easy matter for his mother. Usually she either puts him in the big tub or in a small tub that sets on the floor and in either case it is a back-breaking operation. But a man in the State of Washington has designed a portable bath stand that will probably be hailed with delight. This stand has a small tub in the center, elevated about waist-high. Drawers on either side hold soap, towels and other necessaries, while a hinged flap on one end can be raised if more space is needed. The tub is drained into a bucket through a pipe in the bottom. Of course, this tub must be filled with water from the growing tub or wash stand, but that is offset by the fact that the bath stand can be carried to any room in the house with ease.

The Installment House Evil:

Regularly two or three times each month large city installment houses send crews of men into Janesville to thoroughly canvass the town for orders on their cheap goods for which they get remarkably high prices. It has come to our notice that a lady bought a pair of blankets on the installment plan for $5.00, made by the same mill from which we buy our blankets, but of a cheaper grade. We sell her neighbor ours for $2.00 and the neighbor said: "Why this is the same as my friends paid $5.00 for." And so it goes, on each article they sell they make from 200% to 500% profit. Before you buy a single article from an installment house solicitor call on the local merchant who handles the article you intend to buy and in every case you'll find that he will give you a better article for less money.

"THE WRECK"
by Vitagraph

BE sure to go to the Lyric or Majestic next Thursday to see "THE WRECK." It is a remarkable photo-drama. It is interesting and gripping throughout. It is of big work. The wreck comes about through an unfortunate deed of violence committed in a moment of jealous rage by an irate husband. He regrets the deed ever afterwards, but it cannot alter what he has done. His beautiful young wife is the cause of his deed, though she is not to blame for it, having done only that which a sweet, lovely woman should have done. She was trying to help her son. The man who committed the deed, her husband, goes West with his son to get away from his sorrow. It is on this trip, years afterwards, that the head-on collision takes place which costs the lives of hundreds of passengers, including his own son. The grief-stricken father bows his head in tears, and when he looks up to the heavens, his expression reveals the fact that he acknowledges the presence of an all-powerful hand of justice. He knows that he has been justly punished.

DECISION IN FAVOR

OF GRANT U. FISHER

George Decker Loses Suit Brought to Recover Purchase Price Of An Automobile.

Judge Grimm in an opinion has decided the case of the Janesville Motor Company against Grant U. Fisher in favor of the defendant. The case was brought by Mr. Decker of the motor company to recover the balance due on a Stanley Steamer which he claimed to have sold to Mr. Fisher and his sons, and which he contended Fisher himself had agreed to pay for. Testimony was taken in the circuit court several weeks ago and he was not financially able to pay for it. But what the final deal was, if any, I am unable to find from the evidence with any degree of certainty.

"There is nothing in the evidence to warrant the court in entirely disregarding the evidence of either party. While there is testimony tending to corroborate the plaintiff, there is corroboration of equal force for the defendant, therefore find that the hands of the parties did not meet up on a contract of purchase and sale of the automobile and that no sale was effected as claimed by the plaintiff. "As to the several charges for gasoline, oil, etc., there is no proof that the defendant ever agreed to the purchase of any of the items."

J. J. Cunningham was attorney for Fisher and Mount and Avery had the case for the motor company.

STEAM TO PREVENT

CONCRETE FREEZING

Care Is Taken to Insure Hardening of Cement Floor and Sidewalk in New Bridge

While the weather man continues to be pitiless in his work on the Milwaukee street bridge, the city engineers as a result the contractors expect to have the paving work completed by the end of the week, including the brick between the tracks of the street.

Cement pouring was in progress today, and in order to keep the concrete from freezing it was covered over with straw, canvas and steam pipes were installed in this manner. The temperature was kept above the freezing point, being at 70 last night and 40 this morning. The sidewalk on the north side has been poured and the north walk will be completed by tomorrow.

The removal of the piles from the river will be worked for odd times and can be done as soon as the pavement is laid. The construction of the railing will offer no serious problem.

SCISSORS SHARPENER

Guide Piece Ensures Proper Angle of Blade to Rod.

The sharpening of knives, scissors and the like is not so simple as it seems. Many a man uses a safety razor merely because he does not know how to strip an old-fashioned razor. For the expert of sharpening a steel tool lies in the angle at which you apply the tool to the sharpening device, whatever it may be. To sharpen in the right angle, a New Jersey man has patented a scissors sharpener that has a guidepiece attached. This guide-piece is of greater width than the sharpening rod and has a curved upper edge. It is adjustably secured to the rod and diagonally across the face of the latter, preferably near the upper end. A series of bars drawn across the rod with this guide in place, must be drawn at the correct angle, and there is no danger of breaking down a fine edge.

A nineteen-year-old Leavenworth girl eloped with a Leavenworth boy of the same age and after the marriage ceremony she called up her mother and broke the news. SUCH IS LIFE.
SLANG
By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

SLANG is a home-made language. Real tailor-made English comes in large leather-bound dictionaries, and is very expensive. A couple of thousand of these words are about all the ordinary man can afford unless he works his way through college. But any man can hammer out enough words in his own home with the aid of a little imagination to give himself a large and lurid vocabulary with weekly additions and revisions. Home-made words are now as numerous and as popular as the dictionary kind, and when a man mixes up his own language meets a man who likes his out of the dictionary with the aid of a few pale, spectacled professors of English and style, the two have to talk to each other by signs.
There are three kinds of slang. One kind is used to fill up gaps in the conversation. Some people use slang profusely in order to keep their tongues going while their brains are feverishly clutching for another idea. Another kind of slang is used by busy people who do not want to take the time to talk painfully around every grammatical corner. Sometimes one slang word will express perfectly an idea which would require a dozen costly imported English words to convey. It would take a formal talker half an hour using hundreds of large words to explain politically, economically and from a military standpoint what Theodore Roosevelt meant by "the big stick," and after he had explained it, no one would understand it.
A third kind of slang is used to fill up the gaps in the dictionary, and to give the language a chance to keep up with the imagination. Word pictures can be painted out of the dictionary, but sometimes a slang word is a cartoon all in itself.
When slang words are necessary, they are discovered after many years by the philologists and are received into full communion in the English language. When slang words are bad, they go on the stage.
Very few men are so wise that they don't need slang at one time or another. And very few are so foolish that they will not use it when necessary.

The Evening Chit-Chat

POISE.

I LOVE the word "poise." To me it is one of those words which sound like the quality they express—like "peace," for instance, or "serenity," or "graciousness." And I love the quality the word stands for. To my mind it is a quality which the young people of this country need to cultivate more than almost any.

The other day, at the request of a little friend of mine, I went with her to call on some people whom she admires but stands in awe of. She is a very bright little girl, but nervous and self-conscious. Before we made the call we had been discussing a new book and she had given me a most intelligent appreciation of it. The same book came up for discussion at her friend's home and what was my surprise to hear her say that she did not like it, and make a childish comment upon it which was exactly opposite to what she had previously said.

Afterwards I asked her what had made her change her mind so suddenly. "I didn't change my mind at all," she answered; "that was just because I was nervous. She asked me about it unexpectedly and I said the first thing that came into my head. I didn't mean to say that and I was ashamed afterwards. But that's the way I do when I'm nervous. I say the first thing that comes into my head and I'm often surprised at the things I hear myself saying."

Now, poise was what that girl needed. With a little better balance, a proper hold on herself, and a more thorough control of her faculties she could have made a good impression. As it was, I am afraid she made a poor one, for she showed her lack of poise not only by saying things she didn't mean, but by talking too fast and too much, by laughing too loudly, and by moving restlessly about in her chair and making conversation.

Continually with a chain she wore instead of sitting at ease and letting her hands rest quietly on the broad chair arms as her graceful and well-poised hostess did.

I think a great many young people—and older people, too—fail to do themselves justice at critical times because of this nervous lack of poise. They say things they don't mean and fail to say the intelligent things they are capable of; they make tactless remarks and commit breaches of etiquette; and all simply because they lose hold of themselves and scarcely know what they are doing.

Learn to get hold of yourself. It is a necessary foundation for social success. When you see that you are losing yourself, stop, take a long breath and force yourself to regain your poise. Pause, if necessary, before speaking till you can collect your thoughts and know just what you want to say. Speak slowly but get the right words. Don't fidget, don't laugh or speak loudly, and DON'T be afraid; nobody is going to eat you. Remember that underneath, these people of whom you are so much afraid are nothing but just folks.

If you know the simple rules of etiquette (and if you don't you should get a book tomorrow and study them) and if you cultivate the habit of poise, you will soon cease to do yourself injustice when you most desire to appear at your best.

Heart and Home Problems
BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married for fifteen years; am still in the early thirties. My husband and I have treated me all right until the last two years.

He has made a practice of staying out nights, returning a very late hour from 10:30 a. m. to 2 a. m. He never asks me to go with him, although I know I would like to. Always has an excuse that he is going with some gentleman friend.

At first I tried not to let it worry me, but cannot help feeling hurt. I am a good housewife and do no good, so I tried not speaking for a day or two with the same result. He is a good provider and not drinking man. Always says he keeps respectable company. We have two dear little children. He knows I feel badly, but says it's his business if he wants to stay out nights. What would you advise me to do? Thanking you in advance I am,

AN UNHAPPY WIFE.

Does he stay out every night? If it is only two or three nights a week I wouldn't worry about it, my friend. Perhaps home has grown too commonplace to him. Have you tried making things more interesting at home? If he is a sociable man, invite some of his friends to little affairs at your house. Make yourself as attractive as possible. Don't be afraid of getting tobacco smoke through the house. Keep the children quiet or out of sight when he has company.

The Kitchen Cabinet

HERE'S little pleasure in the house when our goodman's away.

As we advance in life, we learn the limits of our abilities.

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER.

When a baking dish gets burnt, do not scratch or scrape it until nervous and nails are worn out, but put into the dish a little water and take some ashes from the ash pan; let stand on the back part of the stove for a half a day if necessary to soak off, when it can be easily scraped clean.

Egg stains on silver spoons may be quickly removed with a bit of salt on the finger, rubbing well.

Chopping the tougher portions of meat hastens the cooking, and so saves time and fuel.

When one uses gas for cooking, the small simmering burner is a valuable one to know how to use. Much of the cooking may be finished on it when the food is first well heated and boiling on a larger burner.

Avoid much fried food, especially in the evening. Escalloped dishes, cream soups and oysters with macaroni or rice, chipped beef with cream on toast are all good supper dishes.

To remove scorch marks from linen, wet and lay in the bright sunshine. In a few hours it will be as white as ever, unless the fiber has been destroyed by the heat.

Sweet Potato Soup.—Boil and mash a few sweet potatoes and return to the water in which they were cooked; add salt and pepper to taste, a spoonful or two of peanut butter, and serve with the addition of a little milk or cream.

Fruit Sirup Sauce.—Cook together a cup of fruit sirup, one-half cup of sugar well mixed with a tablespoonful of cornstarch. Cook until smooth, then add a tablespoonful of butter.

This sauce is especially nice with cottage pudding, which is a simple cake baked and cut in squares with the sauce poured over it.

PACKER'S DAUGHTER SUES HER HUSBAND

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I went quite steadily with a young man for almost three months and now he goes with a girl. I don't know what to do. Is it right for me to go out to places where he attends and I am present also?

(2) He has a ring of mine. Was it proper of me to write for it, as it was a dear one from my mother? Now he feels very offended that he had to give the ring back. He said he would make a lot of trouble because of it.

(3) I used to recognize him before and would it be wrong to recognize him now? Or shall I entirely keep away from him?

(4) Oh, yes, he has a picture of mine. Would you advise me to get that from him also? Please tell me what to do.

A TROUBLED BROWNIE.

(1) I see no reason why you should deprive yourself of the pleasure of going to places where he goes. You need not notice him particularly. Of course, if you are both friends of the people you visit, it will be necessary to recognize him formally at least. It is very bad form to make our hostess uncomfortable by showing ill-feeling toward anybody who is her guest.

(2) It was right to ask him to give you the ring back. He had no business keeping it. He seems to be a rather unpleasant sort of young man.

(3) You need not recognize him unless you wish to, except, as I said at first, when you meet as guests of the same hostess.

(4) Ask him for the picture.

Vanilla Sauce.—Add one well-beaten egg to one-half pint of milk. Sweeten to taste. Pour the mixture into a double boiler and cook over water until it begins to thicken; take from the fire and add one teaspoonful of vanilla. Serve hot.

The tendency at the present time is very much toward informal entertainments and surely they are the most enjoyable.

I have a friend who has really built her wonderful reputation as a hostess on after theater suppers, Sunday night suppers, chafing dish parties and her afternoon teas, where you were sure to meet most interesting people. In fact she was just as careful in choosing her guests who would "fit in" as she called it, as she was in selecting and arranging her menus. The plans and arrangements for these affairs are best usually if given with an hour's notice.

The only difficulty in a large city where there are many social engagements all the time is being able to get the right people together when they are wanted. But I still insist if the hostess has tucked away in her brain somewhere ideas for these little affairs and the emergency shelf well supplied, it will be this kind of entertaining which will be most gratifying.

In planning informal entertaining decide first what the "piece de resistance" is to be, then all other things shall be added unto it. If this is to be made in the chafing dish, then sandwiches, or hot rolls and coffee or chocolates are in order; if a rarebit is selected then a very simple salad or spiced pickles, good toast, salted nuts and coffee.

Be sure the cheese is fresh and of the American variety. A pound will usually serve six people generously. Eggs and milk with a little cream may be used instead of beer, using plenty of paprika.

Welsh Rarebit. Material—American cheese, one pound; ale or milk, one cup; beaten eggs, two; catsup, one tablespoonful; butter, one tablespoonful; horseradish, one tablespoonful; toast. Directions—Cut the cheese up in the pieces, add the butter to the blender and set over hot water over the oil lamp. Now add the cheese and when melted add the ale or milk, stir well and add one or two beaten eggs. Season with one-half teaspoonful of salt, and the same of dry mustard. Serve on dry toast on very hot plates.

Strained tomatoes are very nice used instead of milk or beer for a change. The charm in this dish is in having everything ready on a tray on the table and knowing how to make it skillfully.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People
BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

"We vex our own with look and tone, Though we love our own the best."

Does that say anything to you? Are you ever guilty of speaking in an unkind tone to the ones you love the best? Reserving the smooth, polite tone of voice for the one who is a chance visitor or a comparative stranger or to you?

How easy it is to get into the habit of snapping—yes, that's the only word that we are not sure he will ever walk at John, and in fact most every one who comes in contact with us in our daily lives; unless it's when a caller comes—and then, what a difference.

How many of us ever think when we say good bye to John in the morning that we are not sure he will ever walk into our home again; for who of us have a lease on life? Yet the way we say the few words of leave taking would impress the stranger as being very formal, to say the least.

The children, too, come in for our share of frigidity when they start for school; we hurriedly put them out, so as to get our work done before the woman next door, never thinking that perhaps their little hearts are fairly hungering for a kind word that will go far towards making easier the lessons of the day.

Thus we go on from day to day, always too busy to show our own that we do care for them; that they are our most precious possessions, until (perhaps) there has been an accident and John has been hurt at his work. In a stunned, bewildered way you listen to the doctor who gravely tells you that he needs very good care as he is run down, not physically fit to stand the strain and shock he has been subjected to—while toiling to provide for you and the children.

Very good care? He will get that you promise yourself and in an agony of shame and sorrow you remember how snippily you said good bye to him this very morn as he left for his work. Snippily, because he had differed with and incidentally so it will not be the only damaged heart around the place you proceed to get peevish at John.

How long is the world going to stand aside, or give a place to the child who in youth is not taught to respect the rights of others; that is not disciplined, taught to be self-reliant? When the child who is raised as a weakling enters the race to earn his own living he will go down in no time, for the very things you shielded him from will be his undoing—he'll expect too much in the favor line.

Ask John—if you don't know—how much favor is extended in the groom outside world, where everyone eventually rises or falls according to their merit.

This is a fitting time to decide to lay in a stock of good cheer and kindness to be used exclusively on the home folks. It is also the time to decide that in union there is strength, and if you've been so foolish as to resent John's making the children into good future citizens—quit it.

WINNINGER COMPANY OPENS ENGAGEMENT

Packed House Greets German Comedian at Myers at Both Performances on Sunday.

Before an audience that packed the Myers opera house to the doors at both the matinee and evening performance, the Frank Winninger company opened an eight days' engagement in this city with a semi-musical comedy, "The Film King".

Frank Winninger and his company need no introduction to the Janesville theatre-goers and Mr. Winninger has lost none of his humorous qualities of whimsical expressions to start the audience in an uproar.

"The Film King" has practically no plot, being a medley of clever vaudeville acts and songs, which are somewhat mature, worked over to fit in the chorus numbers. While the chorus is not large, it compares favorably with many that have appeared on the Janesville stage under the pretense of a high class musical comedy. The scenery and costumes that were presented during the three acts were a surprise to the audience, being most elaborate.

Without Winninger himself the company would be a failure, for, from the time of his entrance to the final curtain, he had but to recite a bit of German comedy or to perform in a clownish way, to put his audience in a laughing mood. The German comedian also showed that he had mastered the latest rango steps since his last visit in Janesville by his amusing dances with the chorus girls.

Of the musical numbers "Nursery Rhymes" led by Betty, the "Million Dollar Doll," the "Pyramid," "Rose" were the best and won considerable praise. The Le Grande sisters were excellent singers and dancers and were cheered many times. In the last act, a tango exhibition was given by two of the chorus girls that was good.

That the company will meet with great success during their engagement in Janesville is certain for the performance was most novel and as Frank Winninger is certain to draw a packed house, a record attendance is looked for.

Tonight the production of "Birds of a Feather" will be offered. On Tuesday night, "Fritz in Central America," Wednesday, "A German Gentleman." The entertainments are very novel and more entertaining than the comedies that the company offered last year.

A kindly old gentleman with a shiny frock coat, celluloid collar and white lawn tie came into my office yesterday, took the best chair in the place and calmly said:

"I came in to sell you an automobile for $2,300."

"I have an automobile," I said, "and this is my busy day."

"Ah, so you have an automobile. Well then, I would like to show you a talking machine."

"I have one now at home and one

"Well then, I have a splendid little clothes wringer for $3.50."

"My wife bought one last week."

"Well then, how about a good lumbar for $1.75?"

"I had seven and gave away five last Christmas. I have told you before that I am very busy today."

"Not too busy to look at a great bargain in an encyclopedia at 75 cents, I hope."

"I have more encyclopedias than I can read if I live to be 400 years old."

"Well then, to get right down to brass tacks, I want to sell you a patent corkscrew for 25 cents."

"I gave him the quarter and he faded out of my office. 'Thanks,' said he. 'That's what I came in to sell you in the first place.'"

That made 42 corkscrews I had purchased from wandering salesmen during the year and only two days before I had sworn never to buy another.

Some Vegetables.

An old Michigan farmer is noted for boasting about the products of his farm. So one day a neighbor, thinking to take a rise out of him, sent his man to ask if he could have the loan of his cross-cut saw to cut a turnip up so as to get it in his cart. He was not sure, however, that he had the best saw, when he received the following reply: "You should have had the saw with pleasure, but I have it fast in a potato."

"Do you remember when I shut you the day you had me sent away?"

"I don't remember you at all."

"Perhaps you remember Mary Turner, who was arrested four years ago for robbing your store, and perhaps you remember that she asked to speak to you before they took her to prison."

The heavy jawed man gave a start.

"Oh, you begin to remember! Yes! There was a girl who swore she was innocent—yes, she swore that she was innocent. And she would have got off—only you asked the judge to make an example of her."

"You are that girl?"

"I am that girl."

There was a little interval of silence. Then Mary spoke again remorselessly.

"You took away my good name; you smashed my life; you put me behind the bars. You owe for all that. Well, I've begun to collect."

"Say, there's a mistake."

"And that is why you married my boy?"

"It is." Mary gave the answer coldly, convincingly.

Convincingly, save to one—her husband. Dick suddenly aroused and spoke with the violence of one sure.

"It is not!"

He stood up and went to Mary, and took her two hands in his, very gently, yet very firmly.

"Mary," he said softly, yet with a strength of conviction, "you married me because you love me."

"No," she said gravely, "no, I did not."

"And you love me now?" he went on insistently.

"No, no!" Mary's denial came like a cry for escape.

"You love me now!" There was a masterful quality in his declaration, which seemed to ignore her negation.

"I don't," she repeated bitterly.

"Look me in the face and say that."

There was a silence that seemed long, though it was measured in the passing of seconds. At last Mary, who had planned so long for this hour, gathered her forces and spoke valiantly.

Her voice was low, but without any weakness of doubt.

"I do not love you."

"Just the same you are my wife, and I'm going to keep you and make you love me."

"She's a crook!" Burke said.

"I don't care what you've been!" Dick exclaimed. "From now on you'll go straight. You'll walk the straightest line a woman ever walked. You'll get all thoughts of vengeance out of your heart because I'll fill it with something bigger—I'm going to make you love me."

Burke spoke again:

"I tell you she's a crook."

Mary moved a little, and then turned her face toward Gilder.

"And, if I am, who made me one? You can't send a girl to prison and have her come out anything else."

Burke swung himself around in a movement of complete disgust.

"She didn't get her time for good behavior."

"And I'm proud of it!" came her instant retort. "Do you know what goes on there behind those stone walls? Do you, Mr. District Attorney, whose business it is to send girls there? Do you know what a girl is expected to do to get time off for good behavior? If you don't, ask the keepers."

"I served every minute of my time—every minute of it, three full, whole years. Do you wonder that I want to get even, that some one has got to pay? Four years ago, you took away my name—and gave me a number. Now, I've given up the number—and I've got your name."

CHAPTER XII. Aftermath of Tragedy.

THE Gilders, both father and son, endured much suffering throughout the night and day that followed the scene in Mary Turner's apartment, when she had made known the accomplishment of her revenge on the older man by her ensnaring of the younger.

Dick had followed the others out of her presence at her command, emphasized by her leaving him alone when he would have pleaded further with her. Since then he had striven to obtain another interview with his bride, but she had refused him. He was denied admission to the apartment. Only the maid answered the ringing of the telephone, and his notes were seemingly unheeded.

Distraught by this violent interjection of torment into a life that hitherto had known no important suffering, Dick Gilder showed what mettle of man lay beneath his debonair appearance. And that mettle was of a kind worth while. He did not for an instant believe that she was guilty of the crime with which she had been originally charged and for which she had served a sentence in prison. For the rest, he could understand in some degree how the venom of the wrong inflicted on her had poisoned her nature through the years, till she had worked out its evil through the scheme of which he was the innocent victim. He cared little for the fact that recently she had devoted herself to devious devices for making money, to ingenious schemes for legal plunder.

So, in the face of this catastrophe, where a less love must have been destroyed utterly, Dick remained loyal. His passionate regard did not falter for a moment. It never even occurred to him that he might cast her off, might yield to his father's prayers, and abandon her.

The father suffered with the son. He was a proud man, intensely gratified over the commanding position to which he had achieved in the commercial world, proud of his business integrity, of his standing in the community as a leader, proud of his social position, proud most of all of the son whom he so loved. Now, this hideous disaster threatened his pride at every turn—worse, it threatened the one person in the world whom he really loved.

He realized that his son loved the woman—nor could he wonder much at that. His keen eyes had perceived Mary Turner's graces of form, her loveliness of face. He had apprehended, too, in some measure at least, the fineness of her mental fiber and the capacities of her heart. Deep within him, denied any outlet, he knew here lurked a curious, subtle sympathy for the girl in her scheme of revenge against himself.

Gilder, in his library this night, was pacing impatiently to and fro, eagerly listening for the sound of his son's return to the house. He was anxious for the coming of Dick, to whom he would make one more appeal. If that should fail—well, he must use the influences at his command to secure the forcible parting of the adventuress from his son.

Finally the son entered the room and went at once to his father, who was standing waiting, facing the door.

"I'm awfully sorry I'm so late, dad," he said simply.

"Where have you been?" the father demanded gravely. But there was great affection in the flash of his gray eyes as he scanned the young man's face, and the touch of the band that he put on Dick's shoulder was very tender.

"With that woman again?"

"No, father, not with her. She won't see me."

"Naturally! She's got all she wanted from you—my name!"

"It's mine, too, you know, sir."

Gilder looked at his son with a strange, new respect.

"Dick," he cried—"boy, you are all I have in the world. You will have to free yourself from this woman somehow. You owe me that much."

"I owe something to her, too, dad."

"What can you owe her? She tricked you into the marriage. Why, legally it's not even that. There's been nothing more than a wedding ceremony. We must get you out of the scrape."

"I'm not sure that I want to get out of it, father."

"You want to stay married to this jail bird?"

"I'm very fond of her."

"Now that you know?"

"Now that I know," Dick said distinctly. "Don't you see, father? Why, she is justified in a way—in her own mind anyhow, I mean. She was innocent when she was sent to prison."

"Don't talk to me about her innocence. There's only one course open to you, my boy. You must give this girl up. If you don't what are you going to do the day your wife is thrown into a patrol wagon and carried to police headquarters, for it's sure to happen? The cleverest of people make mistakes, and some day she'll make one."

Dick threw out his hands in a gesture of supreme denial. But the father went on remorselessly.

"They will stand her up where the detectives will walk past her with musks on their faces. Her picture, of course, is already in the rogues' gallery, but they will take another—yes, and the imprints of her fingers and the measurements of her body."

"I owe something to her, too, dad."

The son was willing under the words. The woman of whom these things were said was the woman whom he loved. Yet every word had in it the piercing, horrible sting of truth.

"That's what they will do to your wife," Gilder went on harshly, "to the woman who bears your name and mine. What are you going to do about it?"

"It will never happen. She will go straight, dad. That I know. You would know it if you only knew her as I do."

Gilder was in despair. What argument could avail him? He cried out sharply in desperation.

"Do you realize what you're doing?"

Don't go to Miss M., Dick, just at the beginning of your life. Oh, I beg you, boy, stop! Put this girl out of your thoughts and start fresh. You're all I have, my boy."

"Yes, dad," came the answer. "If I could avoid it I wouldn't hurt you for anything in the world. I'm sorry, dad, awfully sorry." He hesitated, then his voice rang out clearly: "But I must fight this out by myself—fight it out in my own way. And I'm going to do it!"

The butler entered.

"A man to see you, sir," he said.

The master took the card. "Very well," he said, "show him up." His glance met the wondering gaze of his son.

"It's Burke," he explained.

"What on earth can he want—at this time of night?" Dick exclaimed.

"You may as well get used to visits from the police."

A moment later Inspector Burke entered the room.

"She's skipped," he said triumphantly.

Dick made a step forward. His eyes flashed, and there was anger in his voice as he replied:

"I don't believe it."

"She left this morning for Chicago," Burke said, lying with a manner that long habit rendered altogether convincing. "I told you she'd go."

He turned to the father and spoke with an air of boastful good nature. "Now, all you have to do is to get this boy out of the scrape and you'll be all right."

"If we only could!" The cry came with deepest earnestness from the lips of Gilder, but there was little hope in his voice.

"I guess we can find a way to have the marriage annulled or whatever they do to marriages that don't take," said Burke.

The brutal assurance of the man in thus referring to things that were sacred moved Dick to wrath.

"Don't you interfere," he said.

Nevertheless Burke held to the topic.

"Interfere! Huh!" he ejaculated, grinning broadly. "Why, that's what I'm paid to do. Listen to me, son. The minute you begin mixing up with crooks you ain't in a position to give orders to any one. The crooks have got no rights in the eyes of the police. Just remember that."

But Dick was not listening. His thoughts were again wholly with the woman he loved, who, as the inspector declared, had fled from him.

"Where's she gone in Chicago?"

Burke answered in his usual gruff fashion, but with a note of kindness that was not without its effect on Dick.

"I'm no mind reader," he said. "But she'll probably stop at the Blackstone—that is, until the Chicago police are tipped off that she is in town."

The face of the young man took on a totally different expression. He went close to the inspector and spoke with intense seriousness.

"Burke," he said pleadingly, "give me a chance. I'll leave for Chicago in the morning. Give me twenty-four hours start before you begin hounding her."

The inspector smiled acquiescence. "Seems reasonable," he admitted.

"No, no, Dick!" the father cried. "You shall not go! You shall not go!"

The inspector shot a word of warning to Gilder in an aside that Dick could not hear.

"Keep still," he replied. "It's all right."

"You give me your word, inspector," Dick said, "that you won't notify the police in Chicago until I've been there twenty-four hours?"

"You're on," Burke replied genially.

"They won't get a whisper out of me until the time is up."

"Then I'll go," Dick smiled rather wanly at his father. "You know, dad, I'm sorry, but I've got to do what I think is the right thing."

It was not until the door was closed after Dick that Burke spoke.

"He'll go to Chicago in the morning, you think, don't you?" he asked.

"Certainly," Gilder answered. "But I don't like it."

"Best thing that could have happened! You see, he won't find her there."

"Where did she go then?" Gilder queried, wholly at a loss.

"Nowhere yet. But just about the time he's starting for the west I'll have her down at headquarters. Demarest will have her indicted before noon. She'll go to trial in the afternoon, and tomorrow night she'll be sleeping up the river. That's where she is going."

Gilder stood motionless for a moment. "But," he said wonderingly, "you can't do that."

"Well, perhaps I can't, but I will!" Suddenly his face grew hard. His heavy jaw shot forward aggressively as he spoke.

"Think I'm going to let that girl make a joke of the police department? Why, I'm here to get her, to stop her anyhow. Her gang is going to break into your house tonight."

"What?" Gilder demanded. "You mean she's coming here as a thief?"

"Not exactly," Inspector Burke confessed, "but her pals are coming to try to pull off something right here. She wouldn't come, not if I knew her. She's too clever for that. Why, if she knew what Garson was planning to do, she'd stop him."

The inspector paused suddenly. For a long minute his face was set with thought. Then he snote his thigh with a blow strong enough to kill an ox. His face was radiant.

A beautiful young widow sat in her deck chair in the stern and near her sat a very handsome man. The widow's daughter, a cute little girl of four or five years, crossed over to the man and said:

"Is you married?"

"No; I'm a bachelor."

The child turned to the mother and said:

"What else did you tell me to ask him?"
